Drought in the Marianas to intensify

By KIMBERLY B. ESMORES
kimberly_esmores@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

The National Weather Service based off Tiyan, Guam reports that drought in the Marianas will continue to intensify while extreme drought persists for other islands in Micronesia.

According to NWS' weekly regional outlook report, although the Marianas remains in D-2 (or severe drought), drought conditions will only continue to worsen due to ongoing dry weather conditions.

Meanwhile, extreme to exceptional drought (D-3 to D-4) persists across islands of Yap State, Majuro, and the northern Marshall Islands.

"In the long term, below-normal rainfall is expected for at least the next few weeks, and likely a couple more months across parts of Yap State and the northern RMI. The convergence along the near-equatorial trough (NET) is bringing relief to Palau and parts of Yap State. However, Yap Proper, Ulithi, and Faris in Yap State were just north of the heavier showers and showers will struggle to lift north to these islands, providing little relief to these islands. Models also show the convergence zone in eastern Micronesia rebuilding later this week, increasing the potential for showers across Chuuk, Pohnpei, Kosrae States, and islands in the RMI near and south of 10N, while providing little relief to the Wotje and other atolls in the northern RMI," NWS states.

Because of the current drought conditions, NWS warns that there remains a high chance of wildfires occurring in the Marianas as well as the entire Micronesia.

"A high wildfire threat remains for islands in ongoing dry conditions, particularly the Marianas and Yap Proper, though winds are currently on the lighter side and are expected to remain on the lighter side this week. Remember: all wildfires in our region are human-caused, and conditions are particularly dangerous during prolonged dry, sunny weather, and windy conditions," said NWS.

In related news, NWS reports that the Marianas will be experiencing relatively dry pattern through early next week as the active trade-wind pattern remains to the south.

Gentle to moderate trades will prevail over the coastal waters with combined seas of 5 to 8 feet. At the beach, there is a moderate risk of rip currents for north- and east-facing reefs and beaches. Seas and surf will change very little through the end of the week.

In addition, NWS states that fire danger remains high due to the lack of rainfall and will become extreme if strong winds occur.

"However, winds are expected to be on the lighter side this week," said NWS.

SSHS students welcome MTEC, MVA

Students of Saipan Southern High School's Hospitality & Tourism Class welcomed representatives of the Marianas Tourism Education Council and Marianas Visitors Authority last April 10 to talk tourism.

The outreach team is engaging 4th graders, 7th graders, and 10th graders this year on Saipan, Tinian, and Rota with information and activities highlighting the Marianas' primary economic driver, how it impacts their lives, and ways students can support tourism even at a young age. By special invitation, the team visited the class of instructor Elena Gersonde. Turning the tables on the tourism educators, the students—who are working to earn national certification from the American Hotel & Lodging Educational Institute—asked a number of questions.

"What made you choose this career? What was your first job in the tourism industry?"

MTEC chair Vicky Benavente shared about getting her first job at Hyatt Regency Saipan.

"Newly married with one toddler, I started working in the HR department of Hyatt Regency Saipan," she told students.

"What are your favorite events? What are your favorite places to visit?"

MVA Community Projects specialist Jack Aranda shared that, as an event coordinator, he finds all events held by the MVA exciting and fun.

"If there was one event I do enjoy most, it is Christmas in the Marianas," Aranda told students. "The reason would be, seeing all the effort and practice students put into their performance, as well as seeing their support crew such as their family around to cheer for them. And one of my favorite places to visit is Japan. The food is great, Japan is just beautiful place, and their people are very polite and respectful."

"Any advice for us (high school students)? What's your prediction of our tourism industry?"

MTEC board member Catherine Perry encouraged students to keep to their cultural value of respect—for self, others, and the natural and material world—as an important value for success in the 21st century. She observed that proper long-term planning would be needed to ensure that the development of the Marianas for tourism is sustainable, attractive, and beneficial for the environment and the community.

The presentation also includes an overview of programs and activities of the MVA, including its annual signature events like next month's Taste of The Marianas International Food Festival.

In line with this year's school outreach theme, "Green Spaces, Memorable Places/Kåmpun Betdi, Kåmpun Rikueldu/Llingil Leyil Walúwal," MTEC highlighted the importance of the Marianas' natural beauty in attracting visitors.

Other MTEC board members are vice chair Glenn Policare (Kanoa Resort), secretary Martin Duenas (MVA), treasurer Larissa Larson, Dr. Galvin Guerrero (Northern Marianas College), Larry Lee, Naomi Nishimura (CNMI Public School System), Gordon Marciano (Pacific Development Inc.), and Dr. Yunzi Zhang (NMC).

Schools interested in starting a MY WAVE Club to engage students with tourism may contact Aranda at jaranda@mymarianas.com or (670) 664-3200 for more information. (PR)

IPI: Gray's requests for sanctions should be denied

By KIMBERLY B. ESMORES
REPORTER

Imperial Pacific International (CNMI) LLC argues that the federal court should deny creditor Joshua Gray's requests for sanctions (including contempt) against the casino investor and its director Howyo Chi, claiming that they have done everything possible to comply with court orders.

Last week, IPI creditor Joshua Gray, through attorney Aaron Halegua, filed a petition to show cause against IPI and Chi asking that U.S. District Court for the NMI Chief Judge Ramona V. Manglona order IPI and its director to show cause why they shouldn't be held in contempt for failing to comply with a court order pursuant to an ongoing limited receivership.

Specifically, the petition claims that on Oct. 23, 2023, the court issued an order directing IPI to ensure and fund the security of its personal property until it is sold by limited receiver Clear

Management and delivered to the buyer.

However, the plaintiff argues that IPI and its management failed to comply with the court's order in terms of security when it was discovered that liquor had been stolen from the casino.

option that they can offer the CNMI as a whole.

Speaking during the second day of the CCC board's special meeting on Wednesday last week, Mendiola said his prejudice is not because of what people are writing down about the case or the commissioners or what Gov. Arnold I. Palacios or anybody else is saying.

"My prejudice is can we formulate something that is going to be good for the future of the CNMI," he said.

Mendiola said it's very unfortunate because his term as a commissioner is ending on April 30, 2024.

He said he is praying that something is going to happen with the ongoing settlement discussions with CCC executive director Andrew Yeom and IPI, so that they all can contribute "to a positive moving forward."

The CCC board has granted Yeom's request for an additional 10 business days, or until April 22, 2024, to complete the final details of a proposed settlement agreement with IPI.

Mendiola said in order for him to discharge that responsibility as a member of the commission board, he needs to know that he can count on the process that they're going through and that things are very clear in terms of what to expect with them (Yeom and IPI).

The commissioner said, ultimately, they have to discharge their responsibility in terms of whether to continue with the revocation or not.

He pointed out that like Yeom was saying, his mind has always been how they can resolve all these issues with IPI so that they can get this casino industry going again.

Act request to BOG official Amoretta Carlson last March 18, DeLeon Guerrero asked for information pertaining to the trust account that the current administration had closed on Jan. 11, 2023, or earlier.

The Senate president said she had requested Gov. Arnold I. Palacios on different occasions to grant this consent but has yet to receive it.

She had also requested Finance Secretary Tracy B. Norita last March 18 for information pertaining to the $200 million deposited in trust account and for a copy of the ARPA spending plan and any changes to it that had been approved by the U.S. Treasury.

Norita said during a press briefing on Monday last week that the $200 million in ARPA funds was indeed invested by the previous administration in 2021 and the entire amount was withdrawn and depleted in 2022.

Reyes allegedly forged and altered, on or about Dec. 20, 2023, the terms of employment of a person from 30 days to one year. This offense is punishable by imprisonment of not more than five years.

Iran's attack failed. Its threat to peace remains

Though largely thwarted by Israel and its allies, the assault launched by Iran against the Jewish state over the weekend was a powerful reminder that the Tehran regime remains the biggest threat to peace in the Middle East. Israel's security would be best served now through resolve and restraint, rather than military escalation.

Iranian leaders tried to portray Saturday's attack as a proportional response to a presumed Israeli strike that killed a top Iranian commander and several advisers in Damascus, Syria, on April 1. The operation involved more than 300 drones and cruise and ballistic missiles, with Iran attacking Israel from its own territory for the first time. The assault dramatically increased the risk of a regionwide war, even if Iran hoped the matter was now "concluded."

In military terms, Iran's attack was a failure. Israeli and US forces, with help from the UK, France, Jordan and possibly some of Israel's other Arab neighbors, shot down an estimated 99% of the incoming missiles and drones, most of them before they reached Israeli airspace. Rather than reinforcing Israel's isolation, the attack illustrated how strong its alliances remain despite anger over its conduct of the war against Hamas in Gaza. President Joe Biden rightly vowed "ironclad" support for Israel's defense, even as he pressures Israeli leaders to ease conditions for Gazans.

Like any state, Israel reserves the right to respond to a direct assault on its territory. But a tit-for-tat strike on Iran would cast Israel once again as the aggressor, jeopardizing the support of Europe and even the US. Meanwhile, the war in Gaza is far from finished, with top Hamas leaders still free and more than 100 Israeli hostages in captivity. The border with Lebanon remains unsettled, preventing thousands of Israelis from returning to their homes in the north. After months of fighting, Israel's military is stretched.

The obvious strength of Israel's defenses should serve as some deterrent against future Iranian attacks. Covert action by Israel has had success degrading Iran's nuclear program and its network of militant proxies and could be used again.

Most important, restraint would allow Israel and its supporters to capitalize on the moment, not least by reminding Arab neighbors where their true interests lie. The failed strikes underscore the danger Iran poses to them as well as to Israel. Iran's nuclear advances—it can now assemble enough fissile material for several bombs within weeks—threaten a regional arms race. Its proxies have attacked the Saudi and Gulf monarchies in the past; the détente they have struck with Tehran is unlikely to last. In foiling the weekend attack, the US and Israel have demonstrated to Arab leaders just how useful they can be as partners.

The Biden administration should seize this opportunity to further isolate Iran within the region and beyond. The US should work with its G-7 partners to refocus global attention on Iran's destructive behavior, including its continued support for militant groups like Hamas, its supply of drones and missiles to Russia for use against Ukraine, and its continued stonewalling of the International Atomic Energy Agency. Simultaneously, US officials should press ahead with efforts to revive a deal to normalize relations between Israel and Saudi Arabia, which could open the Joe Biden's empathy was his superpower in 2020. Can he find it again in 2024?

Whatever happened to the empathetic Joe Biden who won the 2020 presidential election?

Some days it feels as if that kindly Uncle Joe has been replaced by a cranky old pol annoyed at voters who don't give him credit for a strong economy.

Last week, when the Labor Department reported that inflation had ticked up to 3.5%, probably delaying a cut in interest rates, Biden didn't offer much solace.

"We have dramatically reduced inflation from 9%," he said. "We're better situated than we were when we took office." That's true, but it's cold comfort to consumers and home buyers.

A week earlier, when a reporter asked Biden what he would tell Americans stressed by high prices, the president replied: "I'd say we have the best economy in the world. We have got to make it better."

It's a theme he's been sounding for months. In his State of the Union address, he extolled the U.S. economy as "the envy of the world."

But a chorus of Democratic strategists say it's the wrong message, mainly because it's missing the element that was once Biden's political superpower: empathy.

"You can't tell people they're better off than they think they are," said Mark Mellman, a veteran political consultant. "It's important to acknowledge their pain. Otherwise it comes across as a signal that you don't understand their lives."

"I wouldn't go out there and extol the miracle of the Biden economy," said David Axelrod, who helped Barack Obama win two presidential elections.

"The right strategy is to say, 'Look, we've made a lot of progress ... [but] the way people experience this economy is the way I did when I was growing up in Scranton, Pennsylvania,'" Axelrod said in an interview with conservative pundit Bill Kristol. "How much did you pay for the groceries? How do you afford the gas, the rent? These continue to be a problem and I'm fighting that fight."

"The message needs to start with empathy and focus on prices, which is the issue that matters most to voters," said Stanley Greenberg, who helped Bill Clinton win the presidency in 1992. Otherwise, he said, "people just get angrier and angrier."

During the 2020 campaign, when Americans were reeling from the human and economic costs of the COVID-19 pandemic, Biden spoke often of his personal history—his upbringing in a family of modest means, the death of his first wife and baby daughter in a 1972 highway crash, the 2015 death of his son Beau—and his feeling of kinship with others who suffered losses.

Biden's campaign wasn't shy about drawing attention to the contrast with then-President Trump, who seemed more intent on dismissing the pandemic's impact. "Empathy is on the ballot," Jill Biden, soon to be first lady, said on Twitter. But those empathetic moments seem to have become less frequent since Biden became president.

By DOYLE MCMANUS

Los Angeles Times

Doyle McManus is a columnist for the Los Angeles Times.

Biden does acknowledge that the economy still has problems, but not nearly as often as he stresses that his policies are succeeding.

"We have more to do. I get it," he said in Arizona last month. "But no question, our plan of delivering for the American people is working right now."

It's also true that the economy has been improving over the last two years, with strong growth, job creation and—in recent months—wage increases. When Biden took office in 2021, the economy had begun to recover from the pandemic, but unemployment was still over 6%. Since then, more than 15 million jobs have been created and the unemployment rate has stayed below 4% for more than two years.

But Biden has reaped little political benefit from those positive trends, mostly because inflation, which peaked at 9% in 2022, has led to persistently high prices and mortgage rates.

Voters are in a sour mood. An Economist/YouGov poll released last week found that 67% of Americans believe the country is "on the wrong track" and 39% believe the economy is in a recession. (It isn't.) Only 20% say they believe the economy will improve if Biden is reelected. Twice as many, 44%, said they believe the economy will get better if Trump wins.

The president still gets some credit for empathy, but less than before. In 2020, the Quinnipiac poll reported that 61% of voters said they believed Biden "cares about the average American"; this year, the same poll found that number had declined to 51%. (Trump trailed at 42% on the topic in both 2020 and this year.)

Inflation is a frustrating problem for any president. There's little he can do to reduce grocery or gas prices. A president isn't supposed to put pressure on the Federal Reserve to cut interest rates and probably wouldn't succeed if he tried.

So Biden has tried to show voters that he's doing the best he can, working to push prices down in areas where the federal government does have sway. One of his favorite talking points is his sponsorship of the 2022 law that allows Medicare to negotiate drug prices and capped the monthly cost of insulin at $35; Biden says he'll try to expand the law's reach if he's reelected.

Biden must again prevent a wider Middle East war

An eye for an eye leaves the whole world blind, as Mahatma Gandhi allegedly said. After Iran's massive retaliation for the Israeli strike against Iran's diplomatic compound in Damascus, it now falls to President Joe Biden to prevent subsequent rounds of escalation from blinding the entire Middle East, or even the world. Biden must punish Iran diplomatically but also restrain Israel.

This will be unfathomably hard. Since the sadistic terrorist attack by Hamas against Israel on Oct. 7, Biden has had to balance objectives that are often in conflict. He has to show his support for Israel, which he again reaffirmed as "ironclad" after Iran launched more than 300 drones and missiles against Israel this weekend. Simultaneously, he has to minimize the death and suffering of civilians in Gaza, a goal at which he has so far failed. And third, he has to stop the war from becoming regional or even global, a prospect that is possible because the militias attacking Israel are backed by Iran, which is aligned with Russia and China.

So far, Biden seemed to be successful in deterring Iran from escalating and expanding the war. When Iran-backed militias killed three American service members in Jordan, the US retaliated with force but also restraint, hitting only Iranian assets outside of Iran. Tehran, for its part, signaled that it would also discipline itself—although the extent of its control over its proxies remains an open question.

It was instead Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu who initiated this month's round of escalation. Without informing Biden, he sent warplanes to destroy part of the Iranian diplomatic mission in Syria, killing several top commanders. This attack on the consulate breached the Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations, which deems diplomatic missions "inviolable."

The mullahs had to answer this strike or look weak to Tehran's proxy militias and Iranians, many of whom already loathe their regime. The only question was how. The retaliation had to be large enough to allow Iran to pose as decisive, but limited enough not to invite an even larger response from Netanyahu, who often seems to view a wider war as one scenario for him to stay in power.

How, then, did the actual Iranian retaliation stack up? The barrage of drones and missiles was huge, and the first direct attack from the Iranian homeland (as opposed to proxy forces in Lebanon, say) against Israeli soil. But Tehran knew that its airborne swarm would travel for hours before crashing into one of the world's most sophisticated air-defense systems—Israel's Iron Dome, Arrow and David's Sling. Moreover, Israel wouldn't be alone; its American and even Arab allies would help defend it, as they did.

The final tally, therefore, was as limited as Tehran had probably predicted: minor damage and about a dozen injuries from falling shrapnel, with one girl in critical condition but nobody (as of this writing) dead. The Israeli, American, Jordanian and other air defenses had shot down 99% of the incoming ordnance.

So you can call the Iranian retaliation for the preceding Israeli strike massive or limited. But the mullahs signaled that they intended the latter. Invoking the United Nations Charter, Iran's mission to the UN tweeted that "the matter can be deemed concluded" and practically pleaded (in all-caps) with Biden that "the U.S. MUST STAY AWAY!"

Netanyahu and his far-right coalition partners may now be tempted to escalate further. Before the Iranian retaliation, he had warned that Israel would answer any hit on Israeli soil with strikes against the Iranian homeland. That in turn would force an Iranian response, while strengthening the hand of those in the regime pushing for Iran to sprint toward turning its enriched uranium into nuclear warheads.

It's therefore up to Biden to prevent the worst. He must restrain "Bibi" Netanyahu vis-a-vis Iran as he has so far failed to moderate him vis-a-vis the Gaza Strip. This means that any Israeli counterstrike, unlike the consular hit, has to be cleared with Washington and be limited enough so that both Iran and Israel can claim victory. Meanwhile, Biden must punish Iran in every way short of the military option. This he seems to be preparing to do, by calling emergency meetings of the Group of Seven and the UN Security Council.

Since Oct. 7, the Middle East, and by extension the globe, has teetered on the edge between various terrible but localized wars and a wider conflagration that may set the whole world ablaze. If anybody can prevent that nightmare, it's Biden.

door to a broader and more unified coalition to contain Iran.

Israel's long-term security requires peaceful relations with its neighbors, including the Palestinians, coupled with containment of Iran and its proxies. Rigorous and assertive diplomacy is needed to accomplish those objectives and prevent a wider war.

But the critical strategists say there's more he can do, especially if he can reactivate his superpower.

"I think he can win with a message that starts with empathy, saying 'I know high prices are killing people,' and goes on to talk about higher taxes for billionaires and corporations," Greenberg said. "Let Joe be Joe."

"Bottom line: Be more like Joe from Scranton and less like President Biden from Washington," Axelrod said.

Biden aides say, sometimes in unprintable language, that they don't need so much free advice. Politico reported last year that the president called Axelrod "a prick."

And yet, they might be listening.

This week, Biden is launching a three-day "economy tour" of Pennsylvania, and he'll begin by talking about taxes. His first stop: Scranton.

My son was killed with a gun. Like too many California parents, I don't know who did it

Like a lot of parents, I've carried a picture of my son everywhere I go for many years. Unlike a lot of them, I have a child who never ages: My son George was shot and killed on July 17, 1996.

My photos of my son remind me of the days before I had to tell my grandson Gabriel, on what happened to be his 6th birthday, that his father had died. The scream I heard on the other end of the phone is one I wouldn't wish on my enemies.

Though I turned my pain into purpose as the president of the anti-gun-violence group Brady California, I trudge through every day with unanswered questions, one of which echoes the loudest: Who killed my son? That's because my son's killer has never been brought to justice.

Not knowing who killed George is unfathomably difficult but not unusual. California's statewide case clearance rate for homicides has been near or under 65% for the last decade. That means more than a third of the state's killings go unsolved, leaving families and communities to bury people they love without ever knowing who committed the crime. And many California cities and counties with disproportionately high gun violence rates have homicide clearance rates even lower than the state's underwhelming average.

Closure is restorative, healing our souls and communities. Knowing the full story of a killing can break cycles of violence and save lives in the process. But I and thousands of mothers, fathers and families in the Black and brown communities most affected by gun violence are denied that knowledge.

I lead the San Francisco chapter of Mothers in Charge, an organization of mothers, grandmothers, wives, sisters, girlfriends and other women who lost loved ones to senseless gun violence. Most of our members' cases remain unsolved. My friend Paula Dix, who leads the L.A. chapter of the group, lost her only son to a fatal shooting that remains unsolved 14 years later.

These unsolved cases perpetuate a vicious cycle of fear, violence and hopelessness. The perceived disinterest in tracking down a loved one's killer erodes trust in police. It may even lead some people to arm themselves, despite the risks of having a gun, because they feel the authorities can't or won't protect them.

By MATTIE SCOTT

Los Angeles Times

Mattie Scott is the president of Brady California and the founder of Healing 4 Our Families & Our Nation.

When this happens to one family, it's a tragedy. When it's amplified to an entire community touched by gun violence, it becomes a crisis. And Black Californians are feeling the weight of this crisis more than most: Research consistently shows that when a victim of gun violence is Black, cases are even less likely to be solved.

I'm thankful for Gov. Gavin Newsom's recent attention to this issue in announcing rewards for unsolved murders throughout the state. But we can go much further with legislation to ensure that fewer families know this pain.

Last week, I traveled to Sacramento with George's picture in my hands to advocate for L.A.-area Assemblymember Mike Gipson's bill to provide more transparency and justice for survivors like me. Assembly Bill 2913 would create a process for family members to request reviews of case files in unsolved homicides. Families deserve fresh reinvestigations of these so-called cold cases.

If we learn who pulled the trigger in more of these crimes, we can work backward through the lifespan of the firearms involved. We can seek accountability from gun sellers, push irresponsible dealers out of business and stanch the flow of illegal weapons into communities. And with restored trust in our government and justice systems, we can employ community violence intervention programs to bring us closer to a future free from gun violence.

By closing more gun homicide cases, we can make law enforcement part of the healing process, break the cycles killing the people we love and have more of the peace we deserve.

UOG student Laxamana named Truman Scholar

Julie Ann L. Laxamana, a senior Criminal Justice and Biology major at the University of Guam, has been selected for the 2024 Truman Scholarship. Laxamana is one of 60 students from 54 U.S. colleges and universities named Truman Scholars this year.

Laxamana is the 21st Truman Scholar from UOG.

"I'm thankful to the Harry S. Truman Foundation for this opportunity and to my mentors at UOG, Dr. Gena Rojas and Dr. Ron McNinch, for their support throughout this process and my time as a UOG student. I am very humbled and honored."

The Truman Scholarship,

a highly competitive and prestigious scholarship, was established by the U.S. Congress in 1975 as the living memorial to President Harry S. Truman. Laxamana can use the $30,000 scholarship to pursue a master's degree at some of the nation's top universities for public service and administration.

According to a press release from the foundation, "Truman Scholars demonstrate outstanding leadership potential, a commitment to a career in government or the nonprofit sector, and academic excellence. Each Truman Scholar receives funding for graduate studies, leadership training, career counseling, and special internship and fellowship opportunities within the federal government."

Laxamana also serves on the UOG Board of Regents as the Student Regent. She was recently named a Congressional Award Gold Medal recipient.

The Congressional Award website states that Gold Medal winners "have committed themselves to at least two years to goal-setting and community involvement.

To earn the award, a participant must log a minimum of 400 hours of Voluntary Public Service, 200 hours of Personal Development, 200 hours of Physical Fitness, and a five-day, four-night Expedition or Exploration."

"We are immensely proud of Julie. It's truly amazing to see our students achieve on the national stage," said UOG President Anita Borja Enriquez. "Her accomplishments highlight not only her leadership capacity, hard work ethic, and commitment to academic excellence, but also the invaluable mentorship from our dedicated faculty. UOG is shaping leaders ready to make a meaningful impact."

Tolentino is a double major in Marketing and Accounting. Hernandez is a Liberal Studies-Business track major and she is expected to graduate from GCC this May.

for their education.

The foundation's mission is to provide financial assistance for students pursuing business administration degrees at GCC and the University of Guam with the expectation that the Foundation will invest in the future leaders of the island community.

Applicants must maintain a 3.0 grade point average, full-time status, and be enrolled in the Liberal Studies-Business track, Accounting, Marketing, or Supervision and Management Associate degree program. An applicant's status as a first-generation student attending college plays a major consideration in selection.

La Mesa Kusina, the island's main Filipino and Mexican fusion restaurant, held a grand opening for its relocated location in Garapan last April 6.

The ribbon-cutting ceremony took place with no less than Bishop Ryan P. Jimenez from the Diocese of Chalan Kanoa praying and blessing the grounds with holy water.

Shortly after the fiesta-like celebrations began, La Mesa Kusina brought out a special grand opening "Promos of the Day"—Lechon Day (Lechon Tacos and Lechon Rice Bowls)—and patrons not only enjoyed the Filipino and Mexican hybrid cuisine, but also took in special performances by the High Tide Band, fun face painting, and vibed with the DJ to cap off the party.

"This is a prelude to our theme of #thedailyfiesta," said La Mesa Kusina operations manager Clint Albert.

Albert and owner John Saludez shared that in addition to adding Lechon Day, the restaurant will also now be serving several alcoholic beverages. In fact, Saipan Tap House shares an adjoining deck space—dubbed the Al Fresco Deck—with La Mesa Kusina and it served Beer on Tap during the grand opening.

What Winnie the Pooh, Mickey Mouse can tell us about public domain, remix culture

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The giant stuffed bear, its face a twisted smile, lumbers across the screen. Menacing music swells. Shadows mask unknown threats. Christopher Robin begs for his life. And is that a sledgehammer about to pulverize a minor character's head?

Thus unfolds the trailer for the 2023 movie "Winnie the Pooh: Blood and Honey," a slasher-film riff on A.A. Milne's beloved characters, brought to you by ... the expiration of copyright and the arrival of the classic children's novel into the American public domain.

We were already living in an era teeming with remixes and repurposing, fan fictions and mashups. Then began a parade of characters and stories, led by Winnie the Pooh and Mickey Mouse with many more to follow, marching into the public domain, where anyone can do anything with anything and shape it into a new generation of stories and ideas.

After a two-decade drought brought on by congressional extensions of the copyright period in 1998, works again began entering the public domain—becoming available for use without licensing or payment—in 2019. The public began to notice in 2022, when Winnie the Pooh was freed for use as the 95-year copyright period elapsed on the novel that introduced him.

That made possible "Blood and Honey"—not to mention a sequel that dropped last month, a forthcoming third and plans for a "Poohverse" of twisted public domain characters including Bambi and Pinocchio. Pooh going public was followed this year by a moment many thought would never come: the copyright expiration on the original version of Mickey Mouse, as he appeared in the 1928 Walt Disney short, "Steamboat Willie."

The mouse and the bear are but the beginning. The heights of 20th century pop culture—Superman among them—lie ahead.

Classic characters, new stories, fresh mashups. Will it be all be a bonanza for makers? Are we entering a heyday of cross-generational collaboration or a plummet in intellectual property values as audiences get sick of seeing variations of the same old stories?

Does a murderous Pooh bear have something to show the 21st century entertainment world?

Films from Hollywood's early talkie era have started to become public. King Kong, who has one of his enormous feet in the public domain already because of complications between companies that own a piece of him, will shed his remaining chains in 2029. Then, in the 2030s, Superman will soar into the public domain, followed in quick succession by Batman, the Joker and Wonder Woman.

The possibility of new stories is vast. So is the possibility of repetition. Classic stories and characters could get, well a bit tiresome.

"I don't feel like it's going to make that big a difference," says Phil Johnston, an Oscar nominee who co-wrote Disney's 2011 "Wreck It-Ralph" and co-wrote and co-directed its sequel, 2018's "Ralph Breaks the Internet."

'Civil War' might be the year's most explosive movie

NEW YORK (AP)—Alex Garland's films have vividly conjured a virus-caused pandemic (2002's "28 Days Later"), an uncontrollable artificial intelligence (2014's "Ex Machina") and, in his latest, "Civil War," a near-future America in the throes of all-out warfare.

Most filmmakers with such a record might claim some knack for tapping into the zeitgeist. But Garland doesn't see it that way. He's dealing, he says, with omnipresent realities that demand no great leaps of vision. He wrote "Civil War" in 2020, when societies around the world were unraveling over COVID-19 and the prospect of societal breakdown was on everyone's minds.

"That was pretty deafening back then," Garland says. "So in a way, it's slightly past zeitgeist. It's actually oppressive."

"Civil War" is an ominous attempt to turn widely held American anxieties into a violent, unsettling

» Alex Garland thinks it's just reporting

For months, the arrival of "Civil War" has been closely tracked as numerous trailers have drummed up intrigue. Texas and California aligned?

"Science fiction," wrote one commentator. Another said: "This single movie had the best 8 year marketing campaign of all time."

Yet "Civil War" is something far more oblique than its matter-of-fact title. The film, which Garland wrote and directed, isn't mapped directly against today's polarization. In a war that's already ravaged the country, California and Texas have joined forces against a fascist president (Nick Offerman) who's seized a third term and disbanded the FBI.

A band of journalists (Kirsten Dunst, Cailee Spaeny, Wagner Moura) makes its way toward Washington, D.C. Much of the film's disquiet comes from seeing visceral encounters of war—bombings, fire fights and executions — on contemporary American soil. ("Civil War," to take advantage of tax breaks, was mostly shot in Georgia.) For everyone who has in recent years wondered "How bad can it get?"—here is a sobering answer.

"When things collapse, the speed at which they collapse tends to surprise people—including people like intelligence officers whose job is to watch and predict when these things will happen," Garland said in a recent interview.

"Things are always in a slightly more dangerous state than they might appear."

The rapidity with which society can disintegrate has long fascinated Garland, the 53-year-old British born filmmaker who emerged with the screenplay to the zombie apocalypse thriller "28 Days Later." Western democracies, he says, can lean too much on their sense of exceptionalism. To him, "Civil War" isn't an act of cynicism. It's a warning shot.

"The consequences of it are so serious that to not take the threat seriously would, itself, be another kind of insanity," says Garland. "It would just be complacent."

In past election seasons, Hollywood has sometimes looked to channel, reflect or capitalize on political discord. Ahead of the 2020 election, Universal Pictures and Blumhouse Productions released "The Hunt," a "Most Dangerous Game" riff in which liberals kidnap "rednecks" and "deplorables" to hunt on a private preserve. After the film became engulfed in right-wing criticism (then-President Trump said it was "made in order to inflame and cause chaos"), it was postponed. When "The Hunt" eventually hit theaters in March 2020, it revealed a more balanced satire of left and right than some feared.

Woman believes mother is playing favorites

DEAR ABBY: I am on a limited income. My younger sister, "Tara," is a medical professional with disposable income she spends on frivolous things. I have one son, age 13; she has three children, ages 14, 10 and 3. Tara and I live a few miles apart; our mother lives 60 miles away. My mother keeps my sister's kids every other week. She rarely keeps my son. I must bring my son to her; she drives all the way to Tara's house to pick up her kids and take them home.

I have "borrowed" a rather decent sum of money from my mother. She regularly asks me about paying it back. She spends a lot of extra money on food for Tara's kids because of their special dietary needs. Between that and all the driving back and forth, my mother has spent nearly twice as much catering to my sister as what I have borrowed in the same amount of time.

I feel this is very one-sided and that, for some reason, my mother cares more about Tara than about me. I also feel like my son is neglected by my mother. Am I wrong for feeling like this? Should I say something or just leave it alone?

LOPSIDED IN GEORGIA

DEAR LOPSIDED: It appears you are jealous of your sister for many reasons. Your mother has the right to spend her time and money on whatever she pleases, as does your sister. I don't know why your mother favors Tara's children. Perhaps it's time to ask her why.

As to her request you repay the money she has loaned you, I suggest you work out a repayment plan starting NOW in the hope that it will improve your relationship with her. But if that doesn't happen, arrange for someone else to watch your son.

DEAR ABBY: When I met my husband, I felt valued. But ever since I got pregnant, he no longer considers my feelings or treats me as a priority. I have to beg for his support, but when his mom and sister need help, he is quick to help them.

The reason I married him was because he seemed loyal and dedicated to his family, and I thought he would be that way with us. However, during the last few months of my pregnancy I have felt ignored. He is not really excited about the baby, and we haven't bonded while I am pregnant.

I feel like I'm the last item on his list. I am slowly detaching from him. Even if things change when the baby is here, I don't think I'll respect him or have those love feelings anymore. I now see him in a different light that I find unattractive. Please help.

Kings eliminate Warriors from play-in tournament

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)—The chants of “Light the Beam!” started midway through the fourth quarter as the Sacramento Kings kept piling on the Golden State Warriors.

A year after having their season ended by their neighbors, the Kings dealt the Warriors a bit of payback in emphatic fashion with a victory that might have signaled the end of a dynasty.

Keegan Murray scored 32 points, De’Aaron Fox added 24 and the Kings stayed alive in the play-in tournament, eliminating the Warriors with a 118-94 victory on Tuesday night.

“We knew what was on the line,” Fox said. “This was just another obstacle in our way. We have to get over this hump. Obviously, losing to this team last year and obviously facing this team now, it’s like, of course we have to face this team.”

Sacramento advanced to play at New Orleans on Friday night with a chance to return to the playoffs as the eighth seed in the Western Conference after snapping an NBA-record 16-year playoff drought last season.

The Kings avenged a Game 7 loss at home to Golden State in last year’s first round by playing cleaner and being quicker to loose balls against the older Warriors in what was one of the most consequential wins for the franchise in two decades.

The loss kept Golden State out of the playoffs for the third time in the past five seasons, including two eliminations in the play-in tournament. The Warriors committed 16 turnovers, gave up 15 offensive rebounds and way too many open 3-pointers, looking nothing like the dynastic team that won four titles from 2015-22.

“I was a sophomore in high school watching them win championships,” Fox said. “We’ve been watching this team for a long time. If it is the end, it is what it is. I’m glad we’re able to beat this team at this at this moment but, they definitely had a hell of a run.”

Klay Thompson missed all 10 shots from the field in what could have been his final game with the Warriors as he heads to unrestricted free agency this summer and a potential breakup of the championship trio of Thompson, Stephen Curry and Draymond Green.

“We need Klay back. I know he had a tough night tonight,” coach Steve Kerr said. “I know I speak for everyone in the organization, we want him back. Obviously, there’s business at hand and that has to be addressed. ... But what Klay has meant to this franchise, as good as he is, we definitely want him back.”

With Thompson struggling, Curry didn’t get nearly enough help. Curry finished with 22 points but was hounded for much of the game by Keon Ellis.

The undrafted Ellis, who was on a two-way contract until February, added 15 points to go with his strong defense. Harrison Barnes scored 17 and Domantas Sabonis had 16 points and 12 rebounds for Sacramento.

“For the most part, they just took it to us the whole game,” Curry said. “There’s really no way around it.”

The meeting between the Northern California rivals separated by less than 100 miles was a rematch of last year’s series won by Golden State. Curry scored 50 points in the seventh game.

The crowd was loud from the start even if the energy didn’t quite reach the level of last year’s matchup, when Sacramento fans celebrated the end of the record-long playoff drought.

Murray hit four 3-pointers in the first quarter and the Kings built their lead to 16 points in the second quarter before the Warriors rallied behind their bench to cut the deficit to 54-50 at the half.

Golden State got within one early in the third quarter before Sacramento responded with a 19-5 run keyed by a pair of 3-pointers from Ellis and more big shots from Murray to build the lead back to 15 points. The Kings were never threatened after that.

“The first play was for me and we just kind of kept going to that early on in the game,” Murray said. “When you’re shot is falling, especially when mine is falling, they always seem to find me.”

LAKERS 110, PELICANS 106

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—LeBron James, Anthony Davis and their supporting cast have the Los Angeles Lakers looking like a tougher out in the playoffs than they appeared to be just a few weeks earlier.

The New Orleans Pelicans, meanwhile, find themselves on the brink of elimination and wondering about the health of star power forward Zion Williamson, whose dominant NBA postseason debut was cut short by an injury in the final minutes of a tight game.

James had 23 points, nine assists and nine rebounds, and the Lakers secured a playoff berth with a 110-106 victory over the Pelicans in the Western Conference play-in tournament on Tuesday night.

“Tonight we showcased what we were able to do both offensively and defensively,” said James, whose team enters the playoffs having won 12 of 15 games. “We’ve got a good group going right now, good rotation, good plan and guys are coming in ready to go.”

Williamson had 40 points and 11 rebounds. But shortly after tying the game at 95 on a driving layup with 3:19 to go, Williamson went to the locker room, throwing a towel to the floor in disgust as he walked into the tunnel with an apparent injury.

After the game, Pelicans coach Willie Green said Williamson had “left leg soreness.”

“He’s going to have some imaging on it tomorrow and we’ll figure out more,” Green said.

Soon after Williamson went out, James hit a jumper, Davis dunked Austin Reaves’ alley-oop lob, DeAngelo Russell hit a 3 and Davis grabbed a crucial offensive rebound, after which he hit two free throws to help the Lakers hold on.

The Pelicans “threw some heavy blows at us,” Lakers coach Darvin Ham said. “They kept swinging. We kept fighting back.”

“It revealed a lot about us and what we’re made of,” he added.

Davis finished with 20 points and 15 rebounds. Russell scored 21, hitting five times from deep. James was 10 of 10 on free throws and Davis 8 of 10.

The Lakers advance to face defending champion Denver in the first round in a rematch of last season’s Western Conference finals, a sweep by the Nuggets. Game 1 is Saturday night.

The Pelicans will host Sacramento on Friday, with the winner earning the No. 8 seed in the West. The Kings eliminated Golden State in the later play-in game on Wednesday night.

“Obviously a tough loss for us,” said Green, whose team could have secured the sixth seed in the playoffs on Sunday but lost at home to the Lakers, 124-108, setting up the rematch in the play-in. “We’ve got to feel this one tonight and regroup and get ready for another one.”

Williamson, Green said, was “fantastic.”

“He settled into the game. He just continued to attack. He found seams. He rebounded the ball. He played fast,” Green continued. “(If) we have him for a few more minutes, maybe we have a chance to pull this thing out.”

The Lakers went 14 of 35 from 3-point range. The Pelicans hit 9 of 29 from deep and Williamson didn’t get a lot of help from the Pelicans’ usual high scorers. Brandon Ingram—in his second game back from a 12-game absence because of a knee injury—missed 8 of 12 shots and finished with 11 points after spending the final few minutes on the bench.

“I just like the group that was on the floor at that time,” Green said. “BI is still getting back, he’s still finding his rhythm. So, I didn’t want to force the issue.”

CJ McCollum missed 11 of 15 shots and scored nine points.

Trey Murphy III scored 12, hitting two 3s from beyond 28 feet in the second half to help New Orleans come back from an 18-point second-half deficit to tie it.

The Lakers led 75-57 after Rui Hachimura’s layup in the third quarter. But New Orleans got back in the game by outscoring Los Angeles 19-8 during the final 5:31 of the period.

Williamson sparked the surge with a pair of layups. Murphy pulled up for a 31-foot 3-pointer in the final minute of the quarter and Williamson’s free throw made it 83-76 at the end of the period.

The Pelicans finally tied it when Williamson slammed down Jose Alvarado’s alley-oop lob in transition to make it 93-all with 3:53 to go.

Looking to redeem themselves for a lackluster loss to the Lakers on Sunday, the Pelicans put together a promising opening quarter and took a 34-28 lead on Herb Jones’ 3.

Los Angeles surged into the lead by outscoring New Orleans 34-16 in the second quarter, leading by as many as 14 after James, who had 15 first-half points, hit two free throws to make it 58-44.

In the final seconds of the half, Williamson sprinted nearly the length of the court on the dribble for a floating layup at the horn that made it 60-50.

NBA average attendance was 18,324 this season, 71% of games were sellouts

NEW YORK (AP)—Attendance was up 1.4% in the NBA this season, with the league setting a slew of records for ticket sales and sellouts.

The total attendance in the regular season that ended Sunday was 22,538,518, the league said—the second consecutive season in which the NBA set that record. Other records set this season included 873 sellouts, 71% of games selling out and the average attendance of 18,324.

The previous marks in those categories: 22,234,502 for total attendance, 791 sellouts, 63% of games selling out and average attendance of 18,077. All were set in the 2022-23 season.

In all, the league said arenas were filled to 98% capacity, another record.

Part of the reason for the attendance boost was the success of the In-Season Tournament, which was held this season for the first time in November and December. The NBA’s average attendance for those November games around the league was 18,208, another record. There were 12 teams—

Boston, Cleveland, Dallas, Denver, Golden State, Miami, Milwaukee, Minnesota, Philadelphia, Phoenix, Sacramento and Utah—that sold out every game. Fans from more than 150 countries and territories purchased tickets to games, the league said.

Detroit scores on a wild pitch to beat Texas, 4-2

DETROIT

(AP)—Gio Urshela had an RBI single and Matt Vierling scored on a wild pitch in the eighth inning to put Detroit ahead, and the Tigers' pitchers continued their solid play to beat Texas.

Andrew Chafin (1-0) worked 1 1/3 hitless innings with three strikeouts. Jason Foley retired pinch-hitter Adolis García with two on in the ninth for his fifth save of the season.

Casey Mize, making his first home start since April 9, 2022, went six innings, allowing two runs and five hits. Mize missed most of the 2022 season and all of the 2023 campaign after undergoing Tommy John surgery and a back operation.

Jose Urena (0-2) took the loss for the Rangers.

The Tigers improved to 3-3 on the club's current 10-game homestand. Since opening the season 5-0, Detroit has gone 5-7.

PHILLIES 5, ROCKIES 0

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Ranger Suárez pitched a seven-hitter, Bryce Harper homered and Philadelphia beat Colorado.

Suárez struck out eight and walked one in the majors' second complete game this season. It was the first shutout for a Philadelphia pitcher since Michael Lorenzen's no-hitter against Washington on Aug. 9.

Harper hit an RBI double in the sixth inning and a two-run shot in the eighth.

J.T. Realmuto also went deep for Philadelphia (10-8), which moved two games over .500 for the first time this season.

Suárez (3-0) threw 112 pitches, 79 for strikes, in his second career complete game. The left-hander retired Nolan Jones on a comebacker for the final out.

ORIOLES 11, TWINS 3

BALTIMORE (AP)—Gunnar Henderson, Jordan Westburg and Ryan O'Hearn homered, Grayson Rodriguez pitched six solid innings and Baltimore trounced Minnesota.

Colton Cowser had two more hits for the Orioles, who have taken the first two games of this series. Rodriguez (3-0) allowed two runs and four hits. He walked three and struck out six.

It was the fourth straight game Baltimore homered at least three times, the first time the team has had a streak that long since 2013.

MARLINS 6, GIANTS 3

MIAMI (AP)—Ryan Weathers struck out a career-high 10 before departing because of cramps in his left hand, and Miami beat San Francisco.

Weathers (2-1) allowed two runs and five hits in six innings. The left-hander warmed up for the seventh, but was replaced by Burch Smith.

Luis Arraez had two hits and two RBIs for the Marlins, who improved to 4-14. Josh Bell also had two hits and scored a run.

METS 3, PIRATES 1

NEW YORK (AP)—Jose Hernandez balked home the go-ahead run in the seventh inning, Jeff McNeil added an RBI double and the New York Mets beat Pittsburgh.

Joey Wendle came off the bench and delivered a tying double in the seventh for the Mets, who have won nine of 12 following an 0-5 start to move over .500 for the first time since early June last year.

New York came back to beat the Pirates for the second consecutive night and has won four straight series after dropping its first two.

Wendle replaced an ailing Brett Baty (left hamstring tightness) at third base in the top of the seventh and doubled off Luis Ortiz (1-1) moments later.

That scored Francisco Lindor, who drew a one-out walk from Ortiz and went to third on Pete Alonso's sharp single to center.

BLUE JAYS 5, YANKEES 4

TORONTO (AP)—Vladimir Guerrero Jr. reached base four times and had two RBIs, Yusei Kikuchi won for the first time this season and Toronto beat New York.

Bo Bichette hit an RBI single and Justin Turner added a sacrifice fly as the Blue Jays became the first opponent to win a series against the Yankees this year. New York had won its first five series for the third time in franchise history, matching its starts of 1926 and 2010.

Guerrero went 2 for 3 with two walks and two singles.

Kikuchi (1-1) allowed one run and three hits in six innings with one walk and nine strikeouts, which matched his season high.

RAYS 7, ANGELS 6, 13 INNINGS

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP)—Amed Rosario drove in the winning run with an infield single and Tampa Bay scored twice in the 13th inning to complete a late comeback and beat the Los Angeles Angels.

Each team scored once in the 10th and 11th innings and the Angels moved ahead in the top of the 13th.

Richie Palacios got the Rays even at 6 with a two-out double in the bottom half of the inning against Carson Fulmer (0-1). Rosario then had a bases-loaded hit down the third-base line that scored Palacios and won it.

Los Angeles starter José Soriano allowed one run and one hit over five innings in his second major league start.

PADRES 6, BREWERS 3

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Dylan Cease pitched six strong innings, Ha-Seong Kim hit a three-run homer and San Diego beat Milwaukee.

Fernando Tatis Jr. had three hits and scored twice as the Padres handed the Brewers their first series loss of the season. San Diego will try to complete a three-game sweep Wednesday afternoon.

Sal Frelick had three of the Brewers' six hits, and William Contreras drove in two runs.

GUARDIANS 10, RED SOX 7, 11 INNINGS

BOSTON (AP)—José Ramírez hit a tiebreaking RBI single in the 11th inning, and Cleveland beat Boston.

With no outs and runners on first and second, Ramírez hit a low liner back up the middle against Josh Winckowski (1-1). After Brayan Rocchio sacrificed and Bo Naylor was walked intentionally, Estevan Florial added a two-run single.

Cleveland closer Emmanuel Clase (1-0) pitched the 10th for the win, surrendering a tying sacrifice fly to Connor Wong. Scott Barlow got three outs for his first save of the season, striking out two.

Gabriel Arias had two hits and two RBIs for the Guardians, who earned their third consecutive victory. Steven Kwan had three hits and scored twice, and Tyler Freeman homered.

BRAVES 6, ASTROS 2

HOUSTON (AP)—Reynaldo López struck out seven over six scoreless innings, Orlando Arcia homered and Atlanta beat Houston.

López (2-0) allowed four hits and walked one in his third straight sterling outing to start the season. He has given up one run in 18 innings for an ERA of 0.50.

Arcia hit a solo home run to left in the second and a sacrifice fly in the seventh.

Luis Guillorme and Chadwick Tromp each hit a two-run double in the ninth to put the Braves ahead 6-0.

Kyle Tucker homered for the Astros leading off the ninth against Aaron Bummer, and Mauricio Dubón had a two-out RBI single to cut the lead to four. After Bummer walked Chas McCormick to put two on, Raisel Iglesias induced a groundout by Victor Caratini to end it and secure his fourth save.

CARDINALS 3, ATHLETICS 2

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)—Lance Lynn earned his first win for the St. Louis Cardinals in seven years with a nati looked like it was going to pull within one run after Nick Martini singled.

DODGERS 6, NATIONALS 2

LOS ANGELES—Mookie Betts tied his career high with five hits, doubling twice and driving in two runs to lead Los Angeles over Washington.

Betts singled leading off the first against Patrick Corbin (0-3) and scored as Teoscar Hernández grounded into a double play. Betts hit an RBI double that increased the lead to 3-0 in the second, singled in the fourth, doubled and scored in the seventh and hit a run-scoring single that drove in the Dodgers' final run in the eighth.

Betts raised his average to a major league-leading .388. It was the third five-hit game of Betts' big league career, the first since Aug. 23 against Cleveland.

Andy Pages, a 23-year-old Cuban outfielder, went 1 for 4 in his major league debut for the Dodgers. He lined an opposite-field single to right on the first big league pitch he saw, a 91.9 mph fastball in the second inning, then scored on Austin Barnes' single.

Jesse Winker hit a two-run homer for the Nationals, who have alternated wins and losses over the past four games.

DIAMONDBACKS 12, CUBS 11, 10 INNINGS

PHOENIX (AP)—Ketel Marte hit a tying solo homer with two outs in the ninth, and Randal Grichuk won it with a pinch-hit RBI double in the 10th, lifting Arizona to a wild victory over Chicago.

The teams split the first two games of the series, which both went into extra innings. They'll play the finale on Wednesday.

Grichuk ripped the second pitch he saw from Drew Smyly (2-2) into the left-center gap, easily scoring Christian Walker from second as D-backs players poured onto the field to celebrate.

The Cubs rallied from two three-run deficits, but still couldn't get the win. Ian Happ hit a go-ahead grand slam as part of a six-run seventh inning that gave Chicago an 11-8 lead. But the D-backs slowly clawed back. Arizona cut the margin to 11-9 in the seventh on Blaze Alexander's double and 11-10 in the eighth on Joe Pederson's sacrifice fly.

Then came Marte's Homer off Cubs closer Adbert Alzolay—a liner that barely cleared the right-center wall. After an official review, the homer was confirmed. Marte finished with four hits.

game tactically," he said.

CNMI national coach Jeff Race gave kudos to Lam for toughing it out against an older and more experienced field in Fiji.

"La Hunn has played in at least four ITF tournaments before this. He's getting better all the time and it's just a matter of time before he gets his first points. He has another one in Fiji next week (Week 2) and three in May. He'll play the two in Guam and one on Saipan."

sion against Aussie Benjamin Chisholm before he and Hiva Kelley of Tahiti dropped a 3-6, 3-6 match against Jacob Cairncross and Harry Forsyth, also of Australia.

"I played pretty good for singles match but I wasn't playing well enough tactically and lost 6-4 6-4, but I learned something after the match so it was a good experience. I played doubles with Hiva Kelley, who is a good friend of mine and we played really good. We had one game that we were up, 40-15, and another game that we were up 40-0. We couldn't get the break off of our opponents' serve and they broke us two times. I think we should have come to the net more and won the important points. Overall, the first week was a good tactical experience," said Lam.

When asked how it felt as a 14-year-old playing in the J30 tourney against older and more experienced tennis players, Lam said the experience was invaluable.

"The level of ITF J30 is pretty good since it's under 18. Most of the good players are in their 17s and they are well experienced. I am trying to keep my returns with a shorter back swing because their first serves are big and I have to keep my shots selection good to win more games. It's a very good experience for me to improve my one more goal in the first half for good measure, and in the blink of an eye, it was 3-0. Latte still couldn't convert any goals in the second half, but managed to shut down MP United's offense. However, Latte left MP United's goals unanswered until time ran out and fell to contend in the third place spot.

In Shirley's match, they got to work quickly as Jeraldine Castillo nipped the net in the sixth minute to open up the game, 1-0. Teammate Marilou Arriola then found an opening nine minutes later, and it was 2-0.

Castillo then broke the game wide open with a follow-up shot in the 22nd minute to make it 3-0, all while Matansa was still trying to get their gears going. Matansa came up with nothing but air throughout the first half, while Castillo collected a hat-trick in the 41st minute for a 4-0 game.

Matansa, however, wouldn't let up and made attack after attack at Shirley's goal. It paid off in the 51st minute when they finally got on board with a goal from Barbara Peteru, 1-4. It was still a long uphill battle to either draw or take the win, and Matansa tried to rally.

Pinyarat Shankweiler then cut Shirley's lead in half after a goal four minutes after Peteru, for a 2-4 game. However, Shirley's went on to shut them down for the rest of the second half and held on to win and advance to the finals.

MP United Pink is facing off against Shirley's in the finals this Sunday, April 21, at 5:15pm.

The third-place game between Latte FC and Matansa FC takes place on the same day at 4pm.

MP United Pink Football Club and Shirley's FC are vying for the Flores-Pee Luwal (Intermediate) Spring 2024 Dove Women's League title after defeating their foes in the semis last Sunday at the NMI Soccer Training Center in Koblerville.

MP United Pink made light work of Latte FC, 3-0, while Shirley's held off Matansa FC, 4-2.

Both MP United Pink and Latte had a tough first 10 minutes of the match as they attempted to maneuver past each other on the pitch. Exchanges led to nothing until MP United's Michelle Masga made a run for the net and notched the first goal in the 13th minute.

Latte then scrambled to make a play but came up short most of the time. Ten minutes later MP United's Rachel Salalila joined Masga on the scoreboard for a 2-nil game.

MP United's Doemiko Flores scorched the pitch with game and won the tiebreaker, 7-4. In the second set I was playing more consistent and more aggressive than the other player," he said.

Lam said it also helped that he was "playing more consistent and smarter and also not giving him (Na) a chance to attack me by moving him around the court," after he went down big in the opening set.

He then thanked his family, CNMI national coach Jeff Race, the CNMI tennis national team, and all his friends for their continued support in his tennis career.

Lam's campaign on Week 2 of the J30 tournament continued with a loss to Australia's Bryan Dickson, 2-6, 1-6.

In the doubles, he and Junhyuk Seo of South Korea were beaten by China's Junzhang Fu and Yulin Li, 2-6, 0-6.

The week before in Week 1 of the J30 tourney, Lam lost both in the singles and doubles. He lost a 4-6, 4-6 deci-
